

Niall MacGinnis

Niall MacGinnis has nearly 24 years' experience of security issues and is currently the Global Security Director for Diageo, the world's largest premium spirits producer, headquartered in London. The department's remit extends to a broad range of security activities including business continuity & crisis management, information security awareness, people & travel security, site and transit security, internal investigations and counterfeit.

Prior to joining Diageo, Niall worked at the Royal Bank of Scotland in several security-based roles, including being the regional head of security for the UK & Ireland, the banks' largest region. Niall began his career in the Civil Service where he held a number of post connected with national security and counter terrorism including three years at the British Embassy in Washington DC.